MSAD #41 Superintendent of Schools Shirley Wright and Penquis Valley Principal Scott Gordon presented an honorary diploma to WWII veteran Kenneth Rhoda on Friday, November 3, 2006. Mr. Rhoda received a draft notice in November of 1942 and left a couple of weeks later for basic training in New Jersey; He was twenty years old. He later traveled to Tennessee, Texas and California. Leaving from San Francisco by ship, Mr. Rhoda headed overseas and after a brief stop for ship repairs in Honolulu, Hawaii, (he wasn't allowed to leave the ship) went on to New Guinea.

As a diesel mechanic trained in the army, Mr. Rhoda's job was to keep the vehicles running. He was able to take a furlough in 1944 and spent Christmas in Australia with summer-like weather. Mr. Rhoda received the rank of G-5 Corporal Technician. He remembers hearing by radio that the war had ended. A longtime resident of the Milo area, Mr. Rhoda worked as a millwright at American Thread, as a cemetery grounds person, and at Katahdin Lumber. Mr. Rhoda was accompanied to the diploma presentation by his daughter, Katherine.

Editors Note: Mr Rhoda is one of the wonderful and proud men and women we are honored to thank at our annual Veterans' Appreciation Dinner! Kiwanis considers this one of our most important Community Service events...so please, if you are an area veteran or service person, come and let us pamper you and acknowledge your sacrifice and the love you have for our country.

HEY, WE'RE CHANGING THE PAPER AND WE HOPE YOU'LL LIKE IT!

The TRN staff met October 30 at Ethelyn and Ed's house and over a boiled dinner celebrated the past five years of publication (November 2 was our fifth anniversary!)

As we talked, some new ideas emerged as to content in the paper, so we're making some changes.

We're adding a "Letters to the Editor" section and eliminating our prohibition of controversial subject matter. The rules for publication are these:

1. Letters containing personal attacks, libelous remarks, profanity, vulgarity, or pettiness will not be published.
2. We reserve the right to correct spelling, punctuation, and grammar.
3. Letters will be published according to date received and space available. We will do our best to publish all letters that meet our rules.
4. Please try to limit comments to 100 words if possible. If longer, your letter may be put in installments.

We know that you have all sorts of things to write to us about, like compliments to people for jobs well done, comments concerning good things that have happened, and things you want to criticize. If you do write a critical letter, perhaps you can offer a constructive remedy also.

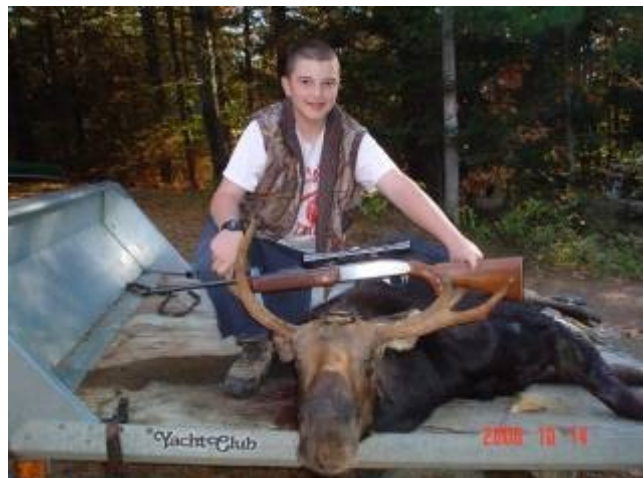

Let's hear from you! Send your letters by email to Ed at etrew@verizon.net or drop a copy in any Three Rivers News collection box.

We are also adding a social section about who visited whom or whose cows got loose or who went to a Red Sox game, and so on. If your pumpkin weighed 800 pounds, we want to know about it. Email your social news to Nancy at nancy2310@adelphia.net or drop it in any Three Rivers News collection box.

We also welcome one-time guest columns, short stories (published in installments), observations about nature, trips you have taken that would interest our readers, and so on. If you would like to write such a column, let us know so we can explain how to format it in Microsoft Word and then you can email it to us. If you don't have email, send your typed column to Ed at 5 Alton Street, Milo, Maine 04463.

The LaGrange Veterans Monument Committee was formed in October of 2005 for the purpose of erecting a permanent granite honor roll with the names of all LaGrange Veterans.

This monument will be the focal point of our new park that is located between the fire station and the town office. Thanks to the generous donation of time and materials from Turtlott Construction and Thibodeau Construction, we now have the basic groundwork done on our park. It is our hope that everyone will come to not only enjoy our park but to also honor the sacrifices that our veterans have made.

We sent letters to the LaGrange High School alumni asking for donations and also information on our veterans. The response has been tremendous, not only monetarily, but more importantly we've had the opportunity to share in the memories of some of our veterans and their families. Anyone having any information on any veterans from LaGrange who served from the Civil War to the present time, please contact Marlene Stanley at 943-2564 or e-mail mastan52@msn.com.

We have been busy these last few months with many fund-raising activities, such as the sale of pens, bottle drives, raffles, and an auction. Currently, we are taking orders for memorial pavers which will be incorporated into the park upon its completion. If you would like to purchase a paver with your veteran's name on it please contact us at the number above.

Also, donations may be made to the LaGrange Veterans Monument Fund at P.O. Box 76, LaGrange, Maine 04453 or at Camden National Bank in Milo.

MILO ELEMENTARY PTO FALL FAIR A GREAT SUCCESS

On the evening of Friday, October 27, the halls of Milo Elementary School were haunted by ghouls and monsters; enchanted by princesses and pirates, and protected by superheroes and a cowgirl! All of whom – young and adult alike – played games and had fun all the while helping to raise money for the school's new playground.

Besides the cake walk, face painting, bean bag tosses, and other fun for the young, an auction was held in the gym. MSAD #41 Superintendent Shirley Wright served as auctioneer, taking bids on beautiful handmade items, food, gift certificates and personal and business donations. Almost all the items were sold to an enthusiastic audience. The few remaining donations will be placed in a silent auction at the PTO craft fair on November 26.

An enjoyable evening was had by all. Much gratitude is expressed for the wonderful donations and for those who bid and brought their kids to play the games. Thank you to the many people who took part behind the scenes of the Fall Fair. Dave Cadieux made the beautiful eye catching posters.

Jack Eastman, Julie Knowlton and their students set up the gym and carried games to the classrooms. Dinner for the public was prepared and served by Marie Hayes, Vikki Carey, Tami Goodine, Debbie Walker, and Nancy Barden.

The Key Club did very well with the children at the games. So many members were available to help. Adult hallway helpers were Barbara Allen, Lisa Golden, Jean McKusick, and Linda Rolfe. Thank you all.

Cindy Davis did a fine job making certain all was well during and long after the fair.

Because of everyone who played a role from set up, auction, games, and tear down, the Fall Fair was a wonderful success, bringing us a step closer to our new playground.

Look for the winners list of the costume and pumpkin contests in next week's Three Rivers News.

SCARY STORY 1ST PLACE 7TH GRADE

SCARY STORY

By Taylor Lovejoy

It was a cold, dark, and rainy night. You could hear the thunder for miles. The lightning lit up the entire sky. On any other night this wouldn't have bothered me so much, but this particular night was Friday the 13th and my parents decided to go out for the night. I was left home alone.

Superstition was starting to get the better of me, since the power kept flickering off and on. I decided I really didn't want to go upstairs, so I got a blanket and snuggled up on the couch to attempt to watch some television. Needless to say that wasn't very comforting because there were horror movies on just about every channel. It didn't matter anyway, because within five minutes the power went out.

I felt my way to the kitchen to the drawer where Mom keeps the matches. Normally I don't use them, but considering it was dark as a pocket, I didn't think Mom would mind if I lit a couple of her many candles.

Just as I got back to the living room and was about to strike a match, I heard a 'scratch, scratch, scratch' on the window. My heart started to thump hard and was racing real fast. I quickly lit the match and lit the two candles on the coffee table. I sat down on the couch and listened real hard. The scratching started again. I wanted to scream but didn't dare. I didn't want whatever was out there to hear me. Then all of a sudden it stopped.

I finally got up the guts to go to the kitchen window to look out. I carefully took one of the candles and made my way to the kitchen. Just as I was getting ready to look out the window there was a 'thump, thump, thump' on the door. There is a window in the door but I could see nothing there from where I was standing. I blew out my candle so that maybe whatever it was wouldn't see me. Every few minutes the 'thump, thump, thump' would continue. I got down on my hands and knees and crawled back to the other room to hide under my blanket.

After what seemed like an eternity, though it was only like 15 minutes, the power came back on. The whole house lit, as well as the front porch. I carefully peeked out the window because the thumping still continued after the lights came back on. I never left like such an idiot. There sat my cat waiting to be let in from the rainy night. Thank goodness no one was home to see what an idiot I felt like.

A half hour later my parents came home and asked me how my night was. I said, "Simply frightful...I mean delightful!"

2nd Place 7th Grade

The Untitled Story

By Camille Cramer

The night was young, and the cool air was slowly creeping under my covers, and seeping into my inner soul. My body gave a quick shiver from the coldness. I reached down to the end of my bed to pull up my patch work quilt and in the corner of my eye, I saw my bedroom door silently open a crack. The room was dark, only a stream of light flowing in from the window, so I could make out a small black figure glide across my room. Suddenly the creature of some sort leaped onto the tail end of my bed and glared up at me with blazing yellow eyes. I popped my arm into the darkness trying to find my lamp on the night stand, and click on the light on. Sitting there, at the bottom of my bed curled in a ball was my cat – my playful, sly, tricky cat.

"Jasper, what you doin' in mama's bed? Huh? Aaaawww come here." I swept him into my arms and arranged the pillows next to me into a little bed for him to sleep. When the both of us were happy and content, I switched off the light to try to catch some sleep. I hated being up alone in my house past 12.

Over a couple of minutes I fell into a deep sleep, where my dreams had taken me to a hotel on top of a hill looking over an old rundown cemetery. The fog was slowly falling in and around the headstone like the morning dew upon the petals of a rose. The moon was dull yellow-orange color and cast a soft light over the old Victorian hotel. As I approached the steps the door, which was over six feet tall, creaked open revealing a dark mysterious gloom. As I cautiously walked up and over the steps, several spiders and rats crawled out from the hidden homes and surrounded me. Not having a way to escape, I took the only out, which was to go in. My nose filled with a foul, lifeless, old smell which caused a bottomless pit to flow in my stomach as well as in my mind. The door behind me slammed, knocking dust from the rafter above. Quickly reaching for anything to bring light to the unseen, I found a drape covering a stained glass window. As I open the drape a gloom of reds, greens, and yellow lit the room.

I was standing in a dusty, gray, Victorian room. To my left was a fireplace with cobwebs, furniture covered in white dusty sheets which had the appearance of ghosts waiting to be unveiled. To my right I found an oak staircase winding up to the second level. Not being able to see down the hallway in front of me, I moved toward an oil lamp to try to get a source of reliable light. When I reached the light, the wick flicked and came alive with a spark of flame.

Startled at not knowing what had just happened I fell back into the cushion of a covered chair. My heart was racing and I wasn't sure if it was the thumping of my heart, or if I really did hear what sounded to be footsteps coming down from the stairs. Again I wasn't sure about either of the two, and wasn't going to wait around to find out so I bolted behind the sofa that was across the room. Silence... Nothing...I was sure that I had just been imagining things and decided to go back to grab the lamp. I turned to look around the sofa and there casting a glooming shadow over my lamp was a tall thin black figure. It was turned away from me so I couldn't see anything to resemble a face.

The figure seemed curious about the recently lighted lamp and started examining the room for a sign of intrusion.

My breathing had stopped and I had a hard time trying to regulate it again to concentrate on clamming myself down, and not doing anything drastic that could endanger me. It walked around the room, trying to justify its assumption. When its search had not been successful, it turned back toward the lamp and blew it out with a puff of breath.

Great...back where I started. Again I was alone, or I thought I was and in complete darkness except for the small stream of light from the window, since the drape had fallen free and was covering most of the window. Scared, not knowing where the figure had gone, I stayed still for what seemed to be half an hour. After I was sure that he must have gone back to wherever he had originally came from I revealed myself from hiding. Knowing now that someone else was accompanying me in this rundown dwelling, I was careful not to make any noise to disturb the unknown.

Coming from the top of the stairwell, I heard a faint cry of despair. Maybe a wail of defeat, or a cry out for help. I inched my way toward the stair case and drew back the drape just slightly to make sure nothing...or no one...was in my path. Carefully, I propelled myself up the steps, pausing at each creak, to make sure I was safe... for now. At the top of the stairs I noticed that the hallway was lit more than the downstairs had been. I also noticed that down the hallway a bit was a door.... a door with a light shining through the bottom crack. Whatever was down stairs must have made its way up here, and trusting my gut feeling I knew that it was lurking behind that door.

I was reminded why I had ventured up by another cry. This time I was close. Drawing myself closer to the other hallway on my left I pressed my ear up against the closet door. A dry, lifeless moan came from the opposite side. Glancing back around my shoulder, I rested assured that the creature had not emerged.

I took the brass handle covered in dust by one hand and gently turned it to the side. The door had shifted open and disclosed a dark, empty, windowless room, with a hunched shadowy figure in the corner. Alarmed by the intrusion, the figure lifted its head and let out a whimperish cry for help. She attempted to stand, but fell to the ground in a slump. Glancing over my shoulder, to make sure I wasn't being watched, I dashed in to aid her. From what sources of light I had I could make out a face, with womanly features, and long snarled hair flowing down her back and framing her face. She was very frail and skinny. I knew that she had been neglected for a long epoch. Her eyes were an ocean blue, and filled with sadness and loneliness.

My arm around her, I rushed her to the door in pursuit of escape. Looking back towards the mysterious hallway, the creature which once was behind the lit room, was standing in the hallway in an angry rage. My heart stopped. He stormed toward us, claws and all. I knew now that he was not human and had many inhuman features to him. He had long claws, waiting to tear flesh, and his face was mashed by a steel mask with three holes for the eyes and mouth, and air waves for where a noise would be found.

The girl I was carrying seemed not as much surprised to see him as I was. It then occurred to me that he must have been holding her captive and I just happened to set her free and he was not so pleased with that.

I turned from his fright and fled down the hallway, not knowing what lay in front of me. I could have been walking into another lair of a raging monster. I could have been sinking into a trap, and would have been imprisoned myself or I could end up falling to my death and the death of my alliance. I ran to the end of the hallway where a window allowed some light to glow in. I then noticed that to the left of me was a door, not a normal size door, but about a 4 foot door. I had a feeling that something behind that door was comforting, almost safe. Trusting my instincts, I extended my free hand and pushed forcefully forward. A spiral staircase. But it wasn't a staircase going up, and it wasn't a staircase going down. I was right in the middle, you could go either way.

The creature was gaining speed, and with every step it took, shook the hallway with its mighty power. I chose t go down because I figured there would be a door leading outside, where I would be free to escape with my bounty. Winding down the spiral staircase I was slightly at an advantage because I was thin and so was the staircase, while on the other hand the monster was thick and tall. It seemed like forever until I finally reached the bottom step. I seemed to be in a sort of kitchen, but not a very good kind of kitchen. The sideboards were all covered with various knives, and torture items. There were huge containers filled with every body part imaginable. Nooses hung from the ceiling and there was a human skeleton hunched over in the corner of the room. The smell was horrific and seemed to travel from my nose to my deepest fears, and made me very nauseous. There was a small window above what seemed to be a sink covered in slime, but it was too small for me to fit through. From the corner of my eye, I saw what seemed to be a latch on a section of the floor. As my eyes traced around the latch, I realized it was a trap door.

The room became suddenly very still, like the calm before the storm, and I was the little ship covering in the tearing sea. All of a sudden I was pushed with great force to the floor, the girl still clinging to me. I scuffled across the floor and stood. There, in the staircase door way was the ugly, slimy, iron-masked monster. He looked around the room and grabbed one of the many knives which were on the counter. Slowly he crept towards us, backing us into the far corner, where mice scurried away. My back was pressed up against the wall and I had no where to go. He came closer, so close I could taste his foul breath on my lips.

The door, I thought, the trap door.

Kiwanis Club of Three Rivers, Milo-Brownville

CHILDREN: PRIORITY ONE

November 1, 2006 Meeting Highlights

Three Rivers Kiwanis met on Wed., Nov. 1st at 6:30 a.m. at The Restaurant with President Ethelyn Treworgy greeting 21 members. Following the pledge of allegiance and the morning prayer, guests were welcomed and those attending included an interclub from Dover-Foxcroft and Penquis Key Club members Kelly Patten and Cheryl Roesing.

Birthdays for the week include Jeff Gahagan on Nov. 3; Peter Conley, Karen Ladd and Don Richards on Nov. 7. It was also noted that the Three Rivers News is celebrating its 5 year anniversary on Nov. 2.

Happy & Sad dollars were given for John Kerry not talking anymore; variety of Halloween costumes; everyone involved in publishing Three Rivers News; for a granddaughter who won an award for best costume; for Club Leadership Education this past Sat.; for a wish that the weather will stay good until it's time to leave for Florida; for the Key Club going to work at Manna; and for our Veterans. Jane Jones also announced that Maine Island Cottage would be making a transitional home at the Dorman Farm property soon. They are manufacturers of high end camps for remote access areas. They expect to occupy the new quarters by the end of November. This will provide some local employment opportunities. The business plans to stay in Piscataquis County. The town also has another business interested in the space at a future time.

An interclub will travel to visit the Greenville Kiwanis Club on Tues. Nov. 7.

A report from the Key Club told us they had chaperoned at the Recreation Dept. Dance last Saturday and they also helped with the Milo PTO Fall Frolic last Friday. Meetings are very well attended. The Key Club meets at 11:10 a.m. on Thursdays at PVHS.

Members were urged to attend the Key Club meetings and also the Terrific Kid Assemblies at all elementary schools. Milo's assembly is on Fridays at 8:30 a.m.; Brownville's assembly is at 8:05 a.m. on Fridays; and LaGrange's assembly is at 10:50 a.m. on Fridays also.

The speaker for next week, Nov. 8, will be Virgil Valente who will speak about Milo's veterans of the Civil War.

Jeff Gahagan, Treasurer, reported that some donations have been made to the Secret Santa fund; a donation was made to Heartwise; and dues are starting to come in.
(Reminder: Dues are due by 11/15)

Plans are underway for the Veterans Dinner on Nov. 11th. Help will be needed on Nov. 10th to prepare vegetables. Let Val know if you can help. Kitchen help and set up help will also be needed as well as bakers for pies.

Eben DeWitt then introduced the speaker for the day, Tom Harrigan. Tom and his wife, Nancy, have recently moved from Florida to Milo where they are renovating their home on Pleasant St. Tom specializes in fossils, minerals, and Native American artifacts. Together Tom and Nancy have traveled all over the world and have had the opportunity to add to his collections over the past several years. Tom added that he has collected for many years, but started in earnest after he retired and moved to Florida.

Tom is a member of several paleontology societies. He started the idea of having a museum in Florida, but ran out of space. His collections were densely packed, as he has over 70 exhibits. He provided photos of stacks of cigar boxes filled with fossils. Many are also enclosed in glass frames. We were able to see first hand fossils of shark teeth. Photos showed fossils of horse and camel teeth, ivory from mammoths and mastodons, natural Indian beads, Native American knives, scrapers, points, fish fossils, horn coral, and numerous other fossils.

He plans to have a museum in his home that will be available by appointment and will also be available to the schools. Tom curates all material himself.

Thanks to Tom for a very interesting presentation.
Respectfully submitted, Lois Trask, Secretary

Milo Free Public Library News

By Judith Macdougall

On Wednesday the library had another busy day. Val Robertson conducted the fourth Kiwanis Kids Korner. There were 36 children at the session with two Key Club members, Karen Bell and Nicole Carey, helping out. There were also Kiwanis members, parents and the Three Rivers Kiwanis Club president, Ethelyn Treworgy, present. The other adults were Edwin Treworgy, Christie Carey, Heidi Finson, Brenda Kelley, Nancy Harrigan, Natalie McClenning and Melissa Robbins. As you can imagine our library downstairs was a very busy place Wednesday. For refreshments the children enjoyed juice boxes and rice cakes. Their major project this session was to remove all the yellow and orange ghosts from the shrubbery outside the library. It was nice to look festive for Halloween, but nice to be all cleaned up again. The library has had a number of juvenile books donated recently, and the staff decided to encourage the children to take any books on the special table that they wanted. We were delighted to discover at the end of the session that all the books had been distributed to the "Kids". Due to Val's schedule she reluctantly had to make the decision that this would be the last Kiwanis Kids Korner for the 2006 year. The program will start up again in the spring. For those children who still have books out, and whose parents cannot conveniently bring them to the library, their library books may be left in the Milo Elementary School office with Mrs. Keith during the month of November. The library staff will pick them up there.

Vaughn Clapp, the son of former library director, L. Grace Clapp, has been bringing in hunting and outdoor magazines to be given to patrons. Many of our male patrons have really enjoyed these free periodicals. He also brought in the magazine Cooking Light, but it has so many useful tips and recipes that we thought more patrons would enjoy borrowing it. We've added that periodical to our magazine collection. Thank you, Vaughn, for your generous gifts. Our regular computer users have noticed more changes this week. Our two oldest computers have been discarded and one new flat screen computer is in place. These computers are all internet and DSL equipped, and patrons cannot believe how fast the screens come up. The Milo Free Public Library is pleased that we have had this opportunity to provide these services to our patrons.

Another box of books from Baker & Taylor has arrived this week. The books are ready to circulate.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

BY KAREN CLARK

When you turn 90 and have 2 dozen roses, a corsage and cake and ice cream.. what more could you expect...Well for Norma Horne it was all of that plus having her husband and family there to celebrate with her.

When you turn 50....

How do you surprise spouses who are about to turn 50?: Janet Richards and Phillip Andrews had the right idea: They invited their spouses out to dinner. Upon returning to Milo they found a house full of friends just waiting to to tell them that (50+50)=100 years for the two new "over-the-hillers". Happy Birthday! Donnie and Julie!
